

Case Study: Custom Payment Portal City of Concord: Providing Solutions in a Time of Need

Closing City Hall during a pandemic does not mean that the ability to collect vital revenue stops. Agencies still depend on revenue such as taxes, licenses, permits, fines, and more sustain operations. When strict stay-at-home regulations are put in place, creating methods to perform daily operational functions are still necessary.

PROBLEM

Recently, municipalities across the world were forced to close their doors to help prevent the spread of COVID-19. Normal operations had to be altered to allow working remotely and finding solutions to maintain the needs of the public.

SOLUTION

The City of Concord currently utilizes HdL for their online applications, renewals, and payments of their business licenses, but needed a quick way to collect other payments from various departments such as police, building, planning, and finance to continue their revenue stream for other items such as permits, taxes, fines, and other fees while having to close its doors to the public to prevent the spread of the disease.

Seeing the success of their online business license solution, the City of Concord reached out to HdL to see if a payment platform could be built to receive payments for other departments. HdL built a custom payment platform which allows the City to receive information such as the taxpayer name, email, phone number, specify a department bill type, a bill ID or case number (invoice number, permit number, etc.), a brief bill description, and PCI method of payment for the taxpayer to remit their fees.

Every time a payment is made, the City receives an email stating the information requested and payment amount as well as a monthly remittance report for reconciliation. Concord's payment platform serves a model for other cities across the United States to maintain operations as normal, but from the safety of their home during this important time.
